

TINLEY LEGION POST TO HOLD VAUDEVILLE

The Tinley Park Post No. 615 of the American Legion at Tinley Park will on Friday, Feb. 15th conduct a huge vaudeville show consisting of 23 great acts.

The entertainment will be of such variety and artistic talent as to furnish a most complete evening of delightful amusement.

The entire proceeds of the show will be contributed to the public school fund of Tinley Park.

The public spirited citizens of this town are utilizing every means of gathering sufficient funds with which to pay their school teachers, who seem to be the state's lost child.

The promotion of this vaudeville show is under the direct supervision of Legionnaire Lester Stoltenberg.

The musical director and guiding genius is the talented Fred Erickson. Mr. Erickson was for many years the leading pipe organist at the Granada Theatre in San Francisco, Calif. All the musical arrangements and transpositions of song for this show are the results of his personal efforts. Several numbers of his own composition will be heard on this program.

Post No. 615, the citizens of Tinley Park salute you!

You are to be congratulated upon the initiative shown in a matter so vital to the children of Tinley Park.

Buhlig, Past State President of the Illinois Congress of Parent-Teachers Associations and present office manager of the state headquarters of that body, will speak in commemoration of Founders Day on "Thirty Years In the P.T.A." A cordial invitation is extended to the entire adult population of Orland Park to be present on this night.

The committee in charge of arrangements has promised a full evening of profitable entertainment. There will be birthday cakes and birthday anecdotes. There will be Valentine games and Valentine favors.

The following warning notice by W. J. Weldon, assistant state's attorney of Cook County, has been received by Judge Sherman S. Knox of Orland Park:

Bremmer, has been canvassing various suburban towns claiming to be a representative of the National Brand Clothes Company, 105 Fifth Ave., New York City and other New York clothing companies. He is said by the National Brand Clothing Company to be an imposter. His method is to get an order for a suit of clothes from a prospect and a down payment on same, after which he disappears.

"The man is described as being about thirty-five years of age, apparently of Jewish extraction, dark complexion, dark curly hair, about six feet tall and weighs about 170 pounds. He has numerous pimples on his face.

Orland Woman's Club Sponsors A Silver Tea

A delightful day and a delightful place, made a perfect setting for the Silver Tea which Mrs. Paul Sanders gave in her home, the Fellowship House of the Community Center on the Southwest Highway and 127th street last Friday afternoon. The Tea was given for the benefit of the Orland Park Woman's Club, and their members and friends were the guests, numbering thirty.

Seated in comfortable chairs around the cheerful fireplace, with the crackling sound of the burning logs as the flames leaped upward, with the friendly pussy cat on the rug in front of the fireplace, dreamily watching the glow of the fire, and the little children nearby on small stools, was the picture each saw, as the hostess and the two other members of the Fellowship, Miss Mildred Rector and Miss Evelyn Winthers seated on the settle, read poems.

Poems on the home, on nature, some composed by Miss Winthers, and poems about boys, playful boys with all their lively contributions to life.

Little Buddy Graves, three and a half years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Graves, in his place by the fire told in his interesting way, with clear voice and accent, in perfect English, the story of the "Three Little Pigs."

Paul, six year old son of Rev. and Mrs. Paul Sanders, standing in front of the fireplace, with his younger brother Frank behind him, recited "I Have A Little Shadow." Frank acted out the shadow.

Tea was served from a table laid with a blue and white cover with Mrs. H. C. Mechor pouring. Miss Lylas Kay, also a member of the Fellowship House family, also was one of the hostesses.

Mokena Road Work Delayed By Errors

Mokena is experiencing a lot of difficulty in getting its share of the state gas tax money for street repair work. Last fall the village officials passed resolutions designating the streets to be repaired, but when the road blue prints were sent to the village, they were found incorrect and were returned to the state highway officials for correction but nothing further was heard about the matter which was then turned over to Howard Schluntz, village attorney for attention. He took the matter up with the state officials and at the village board meeting Tuesday night he had a letter from the state highway department trying to explain the delay and referring to the incorrect map, but upon checking over the letter, it was found that the state men had things muddled worse than ever, so the board finally decided that some of the board members will have to go to the district engineer's office at Elgin to get the matter straightened out. This incident shows lack of efficiency in the state engineering department.

The village dads were pleased to learn that County Treasurer Wirth is proposing to pay each village's share of tax monthly as collected.

A string of tiles along the street adjoining the Scheiblich place on the Front street recently caused trouble and Mrs. A. C. Scheiblich had to have repairs made and considering these tile as village tile presented a claim against the village for a share of the repair cost involved. The board claimed there is no record that the village laid the tile in question and after much debate, the bill was held over until more satisfactory information can be secured establishing the ownership of the tile.

Complaint was also made that garbage is being dumped along the street in front of the Methodist church and the matter was ordered to be investigated and the offenders asked to stop the nuisance.

Additional Bell Added to Frankfort Church This Week

Some time ago the other St. John Evangelical church on route 45 was abandoned and the members united with the St. Peter Evangelical church in Frankfort.

The older members of this old church had the old church bell removed from the church tower. The old bell around which many happy and also many sorrowful memories cling, was not destined to end its existence in silence, for the old church members felt that its claxon call to worship should be heard again so they talked the matter over with the members of the St. Peter's Evangelical church in Frankfort and it was decided to hang the old bell in the St. Peter's church tower with the present bell and the job of hanging the bell was completed Thursday and the two church bells will be rung in unison next Sunday morning. The old bell will once more ring out the call to all who hear to come and hear the Gospel proclaimed as in the days of old.

Talking Movie Draws Big Crowd To Church

The immortal masterpiece of Charles Dickens "Oliver Twist" was presented in a talking movie in the St. Peter Evangelical church in Frankfort last Sunday night before a packed house. The movie was very favorably received and the plan is to present other pictures later on.

FROZEN PIPE CUTS OFF 400 GAS USERS

Freezing of a by-pass of the Public Service Company gas main at Oak Forest near the subway being constructed under the Rock Island tracks, Saturday afternoon, caused over 400 gas users to be without gas service for 17 hours.

The Public Service Company immediately sent gangs of men into the affected territory comprised of Tinley Park, Mokena, Frankfort and part of Oak Forest to shut off all gas. Men worked all night to thaw out the freeze by means of pumping alcohol into the frozen main.

Early Sunday morning sixteen crews of three, men each went to the villages named and shut off all gas meters and took every precaution possible to avoid any further tie up until the gas could be turned on which was done about ten o'clock Sunday morning.

The gas users while greatly inconvenienced, took the whole matter like good sports and were pleased with the promptness with which the gas service was restored by the company.

Many amusing incidents occurred. Oil stoves and electric heaters were pressed into service for heating purposes, while in other cases people went to bed earlier Saturday night. Electric flat irons, toasters, and waffle irons were used for heating water for coffee or tea.

The Public Service Company has taken precautions to guard against any future interruption of gas service from the cause of the interruption experienced.

Tinley PTA Observes Founders Day

The P.T. A. of the Tinley Park school held their regular meeting February 1st, it being Founders' Day, it was celebrated with a beautiful birthday cake and real candles burning on it. One candle was lighted for the president having served one year and two candles for those who had served two years.

Each past president addressed the meeting with appropriate remarks and Mrs. Swisher read a beautiful poem which she had composed for this occasion.

The guest speaker of the evening was Mrs. A. Reed from Chicago. She told of the inspired women who started the P.T. A. movement, in 1895, in the city of Washington, D. C. and how it has now spread over the world.

The P.T. A. sponsored a movie in the school auditorium Wednesday evening for the benefit of the local school.

M. W. A. Pictures Are Instructive

The Modern Woodman in co-operation with the P.T. A. of Mokena gave a movie picture entertainment in the Mokena public school auditorium last Friday evening.

The house was well filled and the pictures were fine. Those of the Century of Progress, the day when the Modern Woodman were honored there, were so real that one very easily thought they were again roaming those familiar streets.

Of course Mickey Mouse, as usual was most interesting as well as a cowboy comedy. The views of the western country, Colorado, where the Woodman Tuberculosis Sanitarium is, were beautiful and it is a wonderful place for those ill with that disease. A fine humanitarian act of the Woodmen fraternity and one which they are doing well.

A collection was taken which was to increase the P.T. A. funds.

A door prize was awarded to Mrs. Harvey Spiess of Frankfort. It was a ham.

News Brevities of Illinois

Ward Sullivan, eleven years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sullivan, Lockport, was drowned in the old Illinois-Michigan canal where he was skating.

Striking at what he termed the "receivership racket," Senator Earl B. Searcy, Springfield Republican, asked the senate to authorize a joint committee of ten legislators to conduct a state-wide investigation.

Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle of Lake county said that the number of prisoners in the county jail at Waukegan was 22, the lowest number at any time in the last ten years. Ten of the prisoners are serving federal sentences.

The first wolf bounty paid in Cook county since 1927 was authorized by the county board for A. R. Kelsey, Lemont township farmer, who claimed $20 for the pelt of a wolf he killed after it ate 19 ducks belonging to a neighbor. The bounty in 1927 also was paid to Kelsey.

Illinois was allotted only $2,800,038 for relief in the last half of January by Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins at Washington, against $6,441,915 for the first half of the month. The reduction was effected under the new rules of FERA forcing the state to contribute more heavily. The total relief bill for the month for the 315,000 persons on the rolls is estimated by the Illinois emergency relief commission at about $12,000,000.

Failure of an East St. Louis merchant to remit to the state under the retailers' occupation tax law resulted in his being fined $50 in the St. Clair county court, Eugene W. Krietner, assistant attorney general assigned to the state department of finance, reported to K. L. Ames, Jr., director of finance, state of Illinois. The merchant, William Routman, is a grocer. In addition to the fine, he was forced to pay the state $675 in back taxes.

Charles Seipp, a La Salle county supervisor, died in a Streator hospital of bullet wounds—the fourth victim of a three-county gun battle between four bandits and a posse. Seipp, a resident of Leonore, Ill., where the battle began when four gunmen were thwarted in their attempt to rob the Leonore state bank, was shot at the outset of the fight. He fell beside Charles Bundy, cashier of the bank, who was killed instantly by the bullets of three of the bandits when they rescued a companion whom Bundy and Seipp had captured.

Informations charging violations of the Illinois liquor control act have been filed in the circuit courts of Sangamon and Knox counties against the Walner Brothers Distributing company of Galesburg by E. W. Kreitner, special attorney general assigned to the state department of finance to prosecute such cases. According to a report to K. L. Ames, Jr., director of finance, state of Illinois, individual informations also were instituted against three officials of the corporation in addition to a civil suit in Knox county seeking judgment for $5,000 alleged to be due the state in back liquor taxes. Director Ames announced that the finance department also had recommended to the state liquor control commission that it revoke the corporation's license.

Disbarment proceedings will be started against Attorney Louis Piquett, who gained notoriety in his career as a criminal lawyer as the trusted adviser of the late Public Enemy No. 1, John Dillinger. President Henry A. Gardner of the Chicago Bar association said the disbarment action would be taken, even though Piquett was acquitted by a jury on the charge of harboring Dillinger while law enforcement officers were hunting the desperado, and without regard to further prosecution of Piquett by the government. The grievance committee of the bar association, headed by Attorney Tappan Gregory, will take the first steps, Mr. Gardner said "as a very vital move in our efforts to rid our ranks of undesirables." It is customary in cases of this kind to await a conviction and then act, Mr. Gardner said, but it was considered that Piquett's case deserves special attention.

Immediate and widespread development of a state police department having the powers of sheriffs and constables was urged in a resolution adopted at the second annual crime conference of Gov. Henry Horner. The conference, held in the State Centennial building and addressed by the governor, several other state officers, department of justice agents, United States District judges, and criminal experts, was attended by approximately 800 local and county officers of the state. The resolution, one of a group advocating various changes and improvements in criminal procedure, also calls for establishment of a state communications system (radio) and the placing of state police under one uniform head. The present state police now number about 300, but has limited powers and can work in communities only at the request of city officials.

Charles Zimmerman, operator in the Peoria downtown office of the Postal Telegraph company, was beaten and shot fatally by a bandit who took $175 from the office safe. Police said Zimmerman recognized his assailant and revealed his name before he died.

The Illinois state civil service commission will hold unassembled examinations for various state positions on February 21 and March 14. W. Emery Lancaster, president of the commission, announced. Applications must be on file in the office of the commission at Springfield ten days prior to the examinations.

HORNS THAT ARE REALLY NOT HORNS

"IF YOU are so fond of the cold, I don't see what you leave the Far North at all for," said Peter Rabbit to Snowflake the Snow Bunting.

"Because, Peter," replied Snowflake, twittering merrily, "like everybody else I have to eat in order to live. When you see me down here you may know that the snow up North is so deep that it has covered all the seeds. I hope I will not have to go any farther south than this, but if some morning you wake up and find the snow so deep that all the weeds are buried, don't expect to find me."

"That's what I'd call good, sound common sense," said another voice, and a bird very near Snowflake's size, and who at first glance seemed to be dressed almost wholly in soft chocolate brown, alighted on the snow and began to run around in search of seeds. It was Wanderer the Horned Lark. Peter had known him ever since his first winter, yet did not feel really acquainted, for Wanderer seldom stayed long enough for a real acquaintance.

Now, as Wanderer reached up to pick seeds from a weed top, Peter had a good look at him. The first thing he noticed was what looked like two little horns above and behind the eyes. It is from these that Wanderer gets the name of Horned Lark. Of course, they are not really horns at all, but little tufts of black feathers. His forehead, a line over each eye, and his throat were yellow. There was a black mark from each corner of his bill curving downward and almost joining a black crescent shaped band across the breast. Beneath this he was solid white with dusty spots showing here and there. His back was brown in places, having almost a pinkish tinge.

MORE EMPHASIS ON FACE

BECAUSE he shared responsibility for the emperor's party taking a wrong turn in their trip through a city which received a royal visit, a police inspector in Japan attempted to commit suicide.

Death was preferable to the disgrace that would descend upon the unfortunate blunderer and his family and all his relatives. For by his mistake this man had "lost face." And in Japan to lose face is a far worse thing than to lose material possessions.

His tail was black, showing a little white along the edges when he flew. Altogether he was a handsome little fellow.

"Do all your family have those funny little horns?" asked Peter.

"No," replied Wanderer promptly, "Mrs. Lark does not have them."

"I think they are very becoming," said Peter, politely.

"Thank you," replied Wanderer, "I am inclined to agree with you."

Just then Peter discovered something that he hadn't noticed before. "My goodness," he exclaimed, "what a long claw you have on each hind toe!"

It was true. Each hind claw was about twice as long as any other claw. Peter couldn't see any special use for these, and was just about to ask more about them when Wanderer suddenly spied a flock of his relatives some distance away and flew over to join them. Probably this saved him some embarrassment, for it was doubtful if he himself knew why Old Mother Nature had given him those long hind claws.

The House Awakes!

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE house awakes with Dickie, whose bare feet Come pattering across the sunny hall, And then the other children's voices fall Across the quiet rooms; and on our street A dozen houses, filled with children, rise And dust the sleep out of their drowsy eyes.

When off to school the happy children go, The house sinks in a sleep as deep as Death, And does not wake till the returning breath Of children make its staring windows glow. And down our street a dozen houses shout, And wake to happiness when school is out!

Jersey and Lace

a man or woman who had lost reputation, honor, dignity, would be ostracized, regardless of how much of the world's goods remained with them.

The western slogan that "money is power," and the penchant for winking an eye where an offender has that power, is important not only in such matters as discredited officials and the absconding rich. It is significant all the way down the line to the daily actions of average people. There is that emphasis on getting what one wants, without too much thought on how one gets it. In social as well as business matters, women are guilty of little tricks to attain their ends, so they undoubtedly "lose face," but they seem indifferent to this as long as their end is attained.

I am not promoting the idea of suicide for lost dignity. But I believe our standards of life would be very much improved by placing more value on what in the East is called "face" and less on getting the things we want.

Steamships Since 1784

Steamships practically date from 1784, although Fulton is credited with the first recognized navigation in 1807, or 23 years later. The actual inventor of the steamboat was John Fitch, who put a boat on the Delaware river.

Woman Becomes an Air Mail Pilot

Many Making Good Use of Enforced Leisure

"My son," said the old father sending his boy out into the world, "never get into an argument with a man who pronounces words the way they are spelled."

"Why not, father?" asked the youth.

"Because," replied the old man, "a fellow who pronounces words the way they are spelled has dug out his knowledge by himself. He really knows what he is saying."

There is tremendous attendance these days on extra classes. Men and women with much idle time on their hands are seeking to turn the hours to good account. And the home work given out to them is done with amazing faithfulness. Those who have been subjected to such discipline can reasonably expect success when jobs are to be had.

Quite as important are those who are struggling to master subjects by themselves. A young man who recently completed his course for a degree made up his mind that there were several subjects he would like to learn. He started on stenography, typewriting and accounting, on his own. Rising early, he devotes at least eight hours daily to such study. His example has stimulated others. Two have joined him. It is a home-made extension course. The graduate of such a school has no certificate, but he should have sufficient power to do without one—Boston Globe.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a girl nineteen years of age. There is a young man who seems to be madly in love with me, but I am not sure I love him; he has proposed to me. He swears that if I marry him he will treat me like an "angel." What shall I do?

Yours truly,

I. M. KICKIDE.

Answer: Always beware of the man who calls you an "angel," or the man who says he will treat you like an "angel." Go to any art gallery and look at a painting of an "angel." You will immediately see all the clothes he intends buying you.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I live in an apartment house and there is a rumor about a married couple, in the same building. The rumor is that the husband beats his wife up every morning. Do you believe this?

Yours truly,

I. WONDER.

Answer: I know the people you refer to and it is a fact that the husband beats his wife up every morning. He gets up at 6:00 a. m. and she doesn't get up till 7:00.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a scientist. At present I am experimenting with "flies." I am trying to solve the big problem of the century; that is: "Should Flies Marry?"

This is my sixth year on the subject, and my greatest difficulty is to keep the flies over the winter months. Last winter I put a fly in a cuckoo clock to rest, but it woke the fly up every hour and the poor thing died from the lack of sleep.

Can you tell me the best place to keep a fly so it can rest peacefully?

Yours truly,

WILL U. HELPMEE.

Answer: Nothing in the world, excepting the discovery of the North pole, will be of greater benefit to humanity than the solution of the problem, "Should Flies Marry?" I find that the importance of flies is a subject to think about. Some folks like flies, others don't. I know one man who owns a candy store and he likes flies so much that he has just engaged a blacksmith for his store. This blacksmith is supposed to "shoo the flies." On the other hand, I hear, every day, of a man named Babe Ruth who doesn't like flies. At least, it appears so, as he keeps hitting flies over the fence. Now I

Lincoln, the Poet

By MARGARET E. BRUNER
in Indianapolis News

THE world has honored him as one whose heart
Was touched by sorrows of a fettered race—
Who, in his kindness sought to ease the smart
Of suffering, nor turned averted face;
For he was kind to every desolate
And hunted creature—lonely tree and bill;
There was a hunger he could never sate,
A longing he could never quite fulfill.
He was a mighty poet, though he wrote
No lines by which the world could know his art;
But I am sure he heard the perfect note—
Felt rhythms which the mind could not impart.
A genial man, and yet with soul depressed,
His songs forever locked within his breast.

Sacred Heritage to the American People

ONE hundred and twenty-six years have rolled into the ages since the birth of Abraham Lincoln. Kindled at the very hearthstone of his being were the fires of two great principles whose flames have burned with a brilliance undimmed by time through generation after generation—the cause of liberty and equality for every man. Believing inherently in these two great truths, his became an inspired vision.

defense of these principles, with impassioned zeal, he led his country to noble victory. The memory of this rugged man of modest dignity and enduring qualities, whose broad ideals become more clearly revealed with the passing years, is a sacred heritage to the American people.

Though the treasured dust and ashes, once his mortal frame, have long been enshrined by a worshipful nation, his immortal spirit lies not entombed, for today, in the hearts of our grateful Republic, the inspiration of the martyred soul of Abraham Lincoln to eternal freedom goes marching on.

Lincoln Wordage Beats
Bible and Shakespeare

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S writings and speeches now in print exceed in volume of words both the Bible and the works of Shakespeare, according to information by Dr. Louis Warren, director of the Lincoln National Life foundation, writes a Fort Wayne (Ind.) United Press correspondent.

In 1772, after three years of work, an English man found that the Bible contained 926,877 words. Shakespeare's complete works have been estimated to contain 1,024,000 words. The written and spoken words of Lincoln total approximately 1,078,365 words, according to Doctor Warren.

While the Bible and Shakespeare's works are complete, many of Lincoln's writings and speeches still are unpublished. The count did not include Lincoln's own personal papers, the traditional Lincoln anecdotes, or the many personal letters which are still in private hands.

Lesson for February 10

PETER PREACHES AT PENTECOST

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2:22-28, 36-42.
GOLDEN TEXT—Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Acts 2:38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Peter Preached a Great Sermon.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Peter Preached at Pentecost.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Story of a Wonderful Day.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Source of Spiritual Power.

In teaching this lesson it is essential that the full meaning of Pentecost be apprehended. It is desirable, therefore, that the entire second chapter of Acts be brought into view.

1. The Day of Pentecost Fully Come (vv. 1-13).

1. The significance of the day (v. 1). Pentecost is from a Greek word meaning fifty. It was the feast held fifty days after the wave sheaf offering (Lev. 23:16). The wave sheaf typifies the resurrection of Christ (1 Cor. 15:20-23).

2. The gift of the Holy Spirit (vv. 2-4). On this day the Holy Spirit descended upon the disciples. This does not mean that the Spirit was not in the world before this, for throughout all the ages he has been in the world, giving light and life to it.

3. Upon whom the Spirit came (v. 1; cf. 1:13-15). The twelve and others, both men and women, to the number of one hundred twenty, which shows that the gift of the Holy Spirit was for all believers, not merely the apostles.

4. The marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-4). These marks were external and internal.

a. External.
(1) The sound of a mighty wind (v. 2). This is suggestive of the mysterious, pervasive and powerful energy of the Spirit.

(2) Tongues of flame (v. 3). Each of the one hundred twenty was crowned with such a tongue for witnessing.

(3) Speaking in foreign tongues (v. 4). This miraculous gift characterized the apostolic age, but no authentic case has been reported in modern times.

b. Internal. This is seen in the transformation wrought in the disciples. Peter, who shortly before this covered before a Jewish maid, now with boldness stands before the chief rulers and declares that they have murdered their King, and are guilty before God.

5. The effects (vv. 5-13).

a. The multitudes were filled with amazement and wonder.

b. Some mocked and accused the disciples of being intoxicated.

11. Peter's Sermon (vv. 14-47). Peter's sermon is as wonderful as the gift of tongues. It demonstrates the presence and power of the Spirit because he was a Galilean fisherman, without literary training. His homiletical analysis is perfect.

1. The introduction (vv. 14-21).

a. Defense of the disciples against the charge of being drunk (v. 15). He cited Jewish custom, showing that they would not be drunk at such an early hour of the day.

b. A scriptural explanation (vv. 16-21). He showed that this was a partial fulfillment of Joel's prophecy (Joel 2:28-32).

2. The proposition, or theme (v. 36). This was the messiahship of Jesus. The argument which followed proved that Jesus was the Lord upon whom they were to call in order to be saved.

3. The argument (vv. 22-36). It was threefold.

a. From Christ's works (v. 22). He was approved of God among the Jews by his miracles, wonders, and signs, with which they were familiar.

b. From his resurrection (vv. 23-32). The Old Testament Scriptures had foretold the death and resurrection of Christ (Ps. 16:8-10). The disciples themselves were living witnesses of Christ's resurrection (v. 32).

c. From his ascension to the right hand of God (v. 33). The proof that he had ascended on high was the wonderful miracle of the Spirit's operation in their midst (John 16:7).

4. The effect of the sermon (vv. 37-42). Many people were convicted of their sins; some three thousand repented and were baptized. The evidence that the coming of the Spirit was real was:

a. That they continued steadfastly in the apostolic teaching (v. 42).

b. They continued in fellowship with the apostles (v. 42).

c. They continued in prayer (v. 42).

d. They gave their possessions to sustain those who had need (v. 45).

e. They lived gracious lives (vv. 46, 47).

Source of Disorders

An improper use of time is the source of all the disorders which reign amongst men. It is a treasure which we would wish to retain forever, yet which we cannot suffer to remain in our possession. This time, however, of which we make so little moment, is the only means of our eternal salvation.

Inspiration

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—At last after years of talking, a social security program is before congress.

Social Security

And now that it is before congress there is a brand new outburst of talk, because it seems the "social security" never can agree among themselves. The result is that leadership in the house and in the senate is trying vainly to follow administration instructions, and has run afoul of all kinds of difficulties. The end is not yet, but it is safe to say without fear of any necessity for retraction that the social security program will not go back to President Roosevelt as a law in the form it was presented as an administration bill.

I find everywhere among those not charged with responsibility for the social security legislation that there is much confusion and lack of understanding as to what the President has proposed. It is easily understood. Any time that it requires thirty thousand words to explain a piece of legislation obviously that legislation must be complex. To comprehend what the length of Mr. Roosevelt's social security message is, it is only necessary, I think, to remind readers that the message with its explanation of the legislation would fill approximately thirty-five columns of an ordinary newspaper. Many persons naturally will fall asleep before they wade through that much material.

But, let us attempt to summarize the social security bill. It provides, first, for a national system of compulsory contributory old age insurance; second, it authorizes appropriations to be used as federal subsidies (plain gifts) to the individual states to help them pension the aged who cannot be brought under an insurance system predicated upon their service in commerce and industry and, third, a voluntary system of old age annuities is set up.

The system of compulsory contributory old age insurance is designed to protect those who are no longer able to work but who have done their turn on the payroll of industry. An old age fund is set up in the Treasury of the United States. Initially, the money comes from the Treasury but thereafter there is a tax operating on payrolls of all those who employ workers in numbers exceeding four. This tax will start January 1, 1937, at a rate of 1 per cent. It is increased to 2 per cent as of January 1, 1942; 3 per cent as of January 1, 1947; 4 per cent as of January 1, 1952, and 5 per cent after January 1, 1957. The employer pays the tax but he collects half of it by a deduction from the payroll of the individual worker.

The age of sixty-five years is fixed as the time when a worker shall retire and receive this pension. The pensioner can receive as much as $30 a month. If the individual dies before retirement, his dependents receive back the amount paid in by his behalf.

As a part of the old age pension system the legislation sets up an old age fund in which workers may purchase an annuity but they never may acquire more than a total of $9,000 maturity value—the ultimate amount—from which their income may be increased.

Then there is the much discussed unemployment insurance. This also is predicated upon a tax on industrial payrolls but it is a state proposition. That is, the federal government is attempting to encourage individual states to enact legislation which will protect the worker in periods such as that through which we have passed since 1929. In other words, this phase of the legislation is designed to cause workers and their employers to lay aside a certain percentage of their income while they are employed, to be used when times are hard.

There are countless subdivisions in the bill, none of which are simple, that seek to protect the many who for one reason or another do not qualify under the general terms of the legislation. For instance, aid to dependent children is provided. Federal health subsidies—a kind of health insurance—is proposed. Maternal aid is arranged, and extraordinary cases are covered, such as aid to crippled children. There are other subdivisions much too intricate to analyze here for the reason that their application is decidedly limited. The drafters of the legislation sought to cover all. Whether they have done so can be determined only after the legislation has been in operation some years.

Counting the Cost

I have been unable to compute the cost of this legislation to the federal and state government and no one, of course, can approximate the expense it will be to industry. It is one of those things so far reaching in its effect as to make utterly impossible advance calculations of the cost in dollars and cents. Suffice it to say that all through the bill as it now wends its way through legislative channels are frequent paragraphs where money either is appropriated or authorized to be appropriated in the future. One was covered the money phases of the bill the other day with a remark that it was not unlike the conversations between Amos and Andy, the radio comedians, for there is five million, three million, twenty million, seventy-eight million and so on through the list.

Yet it is not the money phases that constitute the difficulties in the legislation as the leaders in congress see them. The bill sets up an intricate system of administration against which even the present far flung list of New Deal agencies pales into insignificance.

First, there is the ponderous organization for administration to be created here in Washington. Beneath that there are state organizations in every state, regional and county organizations and even city administrative bureaus. I think it takes no stretch of the imagination to foresee how many workers will be necessary to do just the plain chores of keeping a record of all the individuals on the government payrolls, federal and state, for administration of this legislation.

Here in Washington, we will have a social insurance board, a group of three members, receiving $10,000 a year each and serving for six years. The federal emergency relief administrator will have duties to perform in conjunction with the social insurance board as well as apart from it. The secretary of labor is given jurisdiction over some phases of the administration and the public health service is charged with conduct of the health insurance phases.

This is not all. The secretary of the treasury is charged with the management and investment of all of the monies under the various funds and it is he who must see that they are properly disbursed.

Jealousy Aroused

In congress, considerable jealousy has arisen among committee chairmen, party wheel-horses and those who would enjoy being administration spokesmen. Some of them, it hardly need be said, believe their political salvation lies in following the administration blindly and in addition there is another segment of legislators who keep their eyes on the historical significance of passing events. This group wants to have a leading part in enactment of the social security legislation because, it must be said, this is the greatest of all experiments undertaken at any time by the American government. From lobby conversation it is perfectly evident that there are many men in the house and senate who would be willing to retire to whatever rewards their political service has given them only to become known as the father of the social security legislation.

This condition has precipitated several humorous circumstances. Senator Wagner of New York sponsored the legislation in the senate and Representative Lewis of Maryland proposed it in the house. Senator Wagner's committee arranged to start hearings on a stated date in the senate and that date was announced rather suddenly. No sooner had the Wagner committee hearings been announced than Representative Doughton of North Carolina scheduled similar hearings before his ways and means committee in the house. He set the hearings one day ahead of the senate and the rivalry between the two for headline witnesses has been, to say the least, a source of many jokes.

Some weeks ago I reported to you that there were rumblings of difficulties ahead for the President's gigantic public works program, as his new experiment in recovery efforts is described. He asked congress for a lump sum of $4,800,000,000 with which to revive the heavy industries and other lines of commercial endeavor that they may absorb some of those unemployed now on relief rolls. It will be remembered that in his annual message to congress he said with emphasis that federal aid to the destitute must stop; that the giving of relief directly was a state responsibility.

The first hitch encountered by the administration wheel-horses in guiding the public works bill through congress developed in the house when the leaders, anxious to pass the legislation as the White House dictated, sought a special rule which limited debate to a couple of hours and made it almost impossible for individual members to amend the bill. Several scores of Democrats and all of the Republicans balked. For several days the house leaders fought gallantly to keep the stubborn opposition from running away with things, but the defections from the Democratic ranks became so large that a compromise had to be offered. It was accepted and the Republican critics and Democratic opponents were successfully squelched.

One result of the near revolt against the house Democratic leadership was the exposure of feeling against Secretary Ickes of the Department of the Interior who also carries the titles of public works administrator and oil administrator. A lot of Democrats dislike Mr. Ickes for what they call his political aloofness. Apparently he has not yielded to their demands for patronage appointments and naturally men seeking elective offices hold out that plump as bait to voters.

TRUE GHOST STORIES

"THE 'Ghost of Washington Square' gave me many a night filled with clammy chills at No. 59 Washington Square," related Will Irwin, who is known to be such a shrewd and canny and skeptical reporter that he was asked to investigate and expose the seances of Signora Eusapia Paladino, the notorious psychic. "I might have attributed my nights of horror at No. 59 to a disordered digestion," continued Mr. Irwin, "had it not been that everyone who occupied my apartment had a similar ghostly experience.

"One morning at three o'clock I was awakened out of a sound sleep by a consciousness of some one bending over me. Three mornings in succession—always at the same hour and always without sound or sight of anyone, I was thus awakened. My nerves became unstrung. I moved to a hotel. Then, ashamed at my submission, I moved back to my flat. But I slept with every gas jet burning. The phenomenon recurred, but each time with less intensity.

"During an absence from New York I turned over my apartment to James Hopper. Mr. Hopper was wrathful, rather than grateful, for the shelter of my apartment. He had been made uncomfortable by the same visitation that I had experienced there. Moreover, he had bravely, in the dark, dared the ghost to an open encounter. The challenge had not been accepted.

"Samuel Hopkins Adams heard the story of my weird experience and he wanted to investigate matters under my troubled roof. Despite the fact that he was forewarned and that he is such an alert observer, he could only bear incoherent witness to the visitation.

"Later, while I was on a holiday, two elderly ladies who were former neighbors of mine in New England, asked to use my apartment during their two weeks' visit to New York. A friend of mine was to call for them early the second day of their visit to show them about town. He found them standing on the doorstep, with valises in hand. They wouldn't stay another minute in Mr. Irwin's noisy, fearful apartment! "I could see only one thing to do. I would give up No. 59 Washington Square. It only estranged me from myself and my friends.

"I freed myself of the apartment and heard no further reports of it until one day a friend of mine who keeps a shop on the south side of the square told me that an old gentleman who wandered into her place had become reminiscent about the early days when Washington Square had been the Potter's field and when the gallows had stood upon the place of the present arch.

"Then dolefully pointing to my former abode, No. 59, he remarked, 'and that used to be the morgue!'"

By IGNACE PADEREWSKI
Pianist.

"I VERY seldom play any gambling games. I have not the time, neither have I the inclination to gamble," said the great pianist with a graceful and sweeping flourish of his hand.

"But one day in Monte Carlo I awoke with an irresistible impulse to play roulette and a premonition that luck was running my way. Always, my work has been based on exactitude and study. For once I wanted to play with a premonition.

"I went to the roulette table and won seventeen times in succession. The next morning I awoke with the same compelling hunch. I returned to the tables, and won thirty-eight times. Confirmed gamblers tore their hair because I would not place more than the small 5-franc note.

"The third day my hunch was still strong. Again I went to the tables and won thirty-four times. The Casino was in an uproar. The gamblers decided that Paderewski had a system. The musician with his knowledge of intricate mathematics had evolved a system! Of course, I had no such system. They crowded to my side, and they wanted to place their money on my numbers, but I always waited until the last moment to place my note, so no one would know what number I was going to play.

"The fourth day I awoke with a distinct presentment that my luck had run out. I wanted to test the validity of this presentment, so I strolled to the Casino and placed a few francs. I lost. I played a few rounds and then stopped."

Britain Planting Trees

About 50,000,000 trees are to be planted in the United Kingdom by the forestry commissioners this winter, providing commission for about 3,500 men.

The total area is 21,000 acres, of which 13,000 are in England and Wales and 8,000 in Scotland. About 750 acres are to be added to the New forest, called "New" because it was planted by William the Conqueror in the Eleventh century, and 600 acres to the forest of Dean. The largest forests, totaling 3,400 acres, will be planted in the northeastern counties.

The Voice of the American Legion

By The Tinley Park Post No. 615
Full Strength Navy Sane Defense

What constitutes an adequate Navy? How "big" should the Navy be? The United States Navy, with its proud traditions of service to the nation, must assume a big share of the task of answering those questions in the troubled present and the uncertain future.

The American Legion in its firm and sane defense program, calls for a full strength Navy as allowed by the London treaty, with immediate increase of regular naval enlisted personnel to 91,400 men, and proportionate increase in officers. For the Naval and Marine Corps Reserves, the Legion is requesting funds to provide forty-eight drills, and fifteen days of active duty training each year.

The fundamental purpose of our Navy is to guard the continental and overseas possessions of the United States and to support the national policies and commerce of the nation. Our national security depends upon our power to defend our shores and our overseas possessions and the citizens of the country from hostile attack at any point over which the American flag flies. Our national security depends further upon the uninterrupted importation, across the wide oceans, of raw materials essential to our major industries and hence to the life of the nation. Our economic organization, extending beyond our land boundaries, is vulnerable and must be protected on the seas.

And here we might point out that the Navy is a great peace-time asset to the nation. The words of President Coolidge, on the occasion of the Navy Day celebration in 1924 are appropriate:

"Our Navy has always been much more than an arm of wartime defense. All the money that has ever been spent on the Navy has been returned to the community several times over in direct stimulus to industrial development. We may be very sure that in the future, as in the past, the Navy's service to industry and the arts of peace and science will continue completely to justify its maintenance in the highest efficiency."

Of all naval expenditures of our Government, eighty-five per cent goes right back into salaries, wages and pay of labor, while the remainder finds its way back through the purchase of material. Through new construction and repair work, if given a chance for present needed activities, the Navy will do a full share of lifting the load of unemployment.

The United States Navy has always been out in front in matters of scientific development. Whether in peace-time or under the pressure of war, the Navy's contributions to America are many and lasting.

Legion Submits Bill To Outlaw Red Candidates
Determined to crush Communism as a political and social organization in this country, The American Legion has prepared legislation which will bar Communist candidates for public office from the electoral ballots in every state in the nation.

As director of the National Americanism Commission of the Legion, Homer L. Chaillaux has sent to all state and territorial departments a model bill completely disfranchising every political party which advocates the overthrow of the American government by force or violence and which advocates or carries on a program of sedition or treason.

This bill will be introduced in every state legislature, regardless of whether or not the state recognizes the Communist Party or other political groups advocating revolution or treason.

"The model bill follows:
"No political party shall be recognized and given a place on the ballot which advocates the overthrow by force or violence, or which advocates or carries on a program of sedition or of treason by radio, speech or press, or of local, state, or national government. No newly-organized political party shall be permitted on the ballot until it has filed an affidavit by its officers, under oath, that it does not advocate the overthrow of local, state or national government by force or violence, and that it is not affiliated in any way with any political party or organization, or sub-divisions of organizations, which does advocate such a policy by radio, speech or press."

Chaillaux's action was in accord with a mandate of the Miami, Florida, national convention which designated Americanism as a primary activity for 1935, and specifically ordered all departments to take measures to obtain laws denying political rights to the Communist Party and all other organizations which advocate the use of bullets instead of the ballot in bringing about change in government.

The fifth grade related interesting incidents in the life of Benjamin Franklin, one of our most famous Americans. The 8th grade, in a history discussion, showed how the invention of machines changed our methods of living.

Arthur Beagley, one of our pupils, whose birthday anniversary was on January 30, sent greetings to President Roosevelt. Arthur, on his birthday, received greetings from the president.

Miss Myrick took some of Lila Enders' art work to an art class exhibit at the Field Museum where it was considered very good.

Norman H. Yunker, during his spare time at home, has made a simple home-made lathe. With a little help from his brother, he is now making a colonial night table as a wood work project.

June Iverson, Joyce Beagley and Laura Gene Taylor have joined the tap dancing class.

The pupils who have been neither tardy nor absent during the month of January are: Joyce and Arthur Beagley, Arlie and Ruby Bradie, Earl and Bernice Enders, Dorothy, Donald and Norman Yunker.

MOKENA LOSES

TO MIDLOTHIAN
Mokena lost their game in the Tinley Park Tournament by only 1 point. The Mokena boys scored first and had a good hold on the game when they started going haywire and the Midlothian lads got hot and rolled up 18 points before the boys could stop them. Stuart made 12 points for Midlothian. Bill made 13 points for Mokena. This was a hard game and only a team like Midlothian could beat the boys. The final score was 24 to 23.

4th Annual "Hello America" Radio Rally, Feb. 14th

Be Sure to Tune In

The fourth annual "Hello America!" radio program sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, will be broadcast on Thursday night, February 14th. The presentation will occupy a full hour from 10:30 to 11:30, Central Standard Time; on NBC Network.

In through the courtesy of the National Broadcasting Company, which again will contribute its facilities to the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, this impressive ceremony and program will be carried to millions of radio listeners and to the local meetings of a great majority of approximately 3,200 V. F. W. units in virtually every state throughout the country.

Assembled in most of the Post headquarters throughout the organization, will be thousands of new recruits, prepared to take the radio oath of obligation which will be administered from Washington by Commander in Chief James E. Van Zandt. This nationwide radio obligation of the largest Commander in Chief's class of the year is a ceremony unique among veteran activities. It possesses a dramatic appeal, especially impressive to the organization as a whole, as well as to millions in the radio audience to whom this phase of V. F. W. activity is generally unknown.

In addition to this ritual ceremony, the program will include a number of addresses by nationally known speakers, a fifteen minute dramatic sketch and a number of specially dedicated musical selections by famous hotel and supper club orchestras playing in New York City.

Speakers will include Commander in Chief Van Zandt; National Auxiliary President Winifred D. Toussaint, and United States Representative William F. Connery, Jr. of Massachusetts.

Commander in Chief Van Zandt's address will be concerned mainly with the progress of the V. F. W. legislative program in the 74th Congress. National President Toussaint will discuss the countrywide program of the Auxiliary, with special reference to the V. F. W. National Home at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, and Congressman Connery will present his personal views as regards veteran legislation. Congressman Connery is a World War veteran, serving nineteen months overseas with the A. E. F. and received his honorable discharge April 28, 1919. His experience on the professional stage in support of Geo. M. Cohan, Margaret Anglin, Irene Franklin and other famous dramatic stars for a number of years, undoubtedly contributed to his present success as a dynamic and magnetic orator. He frequently has appeared on V. F. W. programs.

The "Hello America!" radio hour is one of the V. F. W.'s outstanding "get-together" occasions of the year. No patriotic citizen who hears this national broadcast can fail to be impressed with the spirit of comradeship and service which pervade the entire membership of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S.

Sunday Evening Club has been elected for the ensuing term: The special music committee is headed by Miss Agnes Haley with Evelyn Cutler and Irene Storm; Social committee is composed of Helen Frazer, Loren Sass, Ethel Rapson, Alma Handorf and Henry Hull; Eleanor Sabin remains on the program committee with Earl Cutler, Dorothy Tilsy and Russel Lauffer; Ralph Tilsy, Francis Nelson, John Handorf and James Tilsy are the ushers; Russel Faar, Publicity; and Miss Caroline Tilsy and Frances Gillette, flower committee.

Guesswork and Farm Profits

The farmer with a telephone need not guess or take chances—he can call up and find out. By using his telephone and eliminating guesswork in buying, selling and other important details of farm management, he saves many trips and avoids many of the disadvantages which may threaten the results of his work.

Whatever the farm telephone earns and saves above the small cost of the service is profit to the farmer—profit he otherwise might not make. And, as every farmer knows, this is not the only value of his telephone. For the security of his family and the protection of his property it is priceless.

Aprons That Are Chic and Useful

PATTERN 2060

The housewife who takes pride in her kitchen usually takes great interest in a goodly supply of chic aprons, and where could you find two lovelier models than those shown today. Both are included in the one pattern and both have slenderizing front panels and that fashionable half-belted waistline. The upper design gives fine opportunity for using rick-rack braid to set off the lines of its smart V neck and spacious pockets. The lower sketch boasts a youthfully rounded neckline and jaunty capelike shoulders, and would be as pretty as can be made up in a dainty dotted swiss, edged with embroidery.

Pattern 2060 is available in sizes small, medium and large. Medium size, each apron takes one and a half yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included. SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE. GOLDEN DAWN

CHAPTER I

By PETER B. KYNE

Mr. Theodore Gatlin's married life had demonstrated to him the absolute fallacy of the ecclesiastical contention that marriages are made in heaven.

In the beginning he had married Louise Hanchett for a number of reasons, none of them really important. She was of good family; i. e., her parents were prosperous middle-class folk whom scandal had never touched. They were eminently respectable if a trifle bovine in disposition and Louise was their only child, and sole heir to such worldly goods as her parents might have accumulated and which Mr. Gatlin believed they were not likely to dissipate; for which reason he did not contemplate having to support them in their helpless age.

These were the common sense reasons which his self-respect as a business man indicated he should concur to his defense in making this important step; in reality they were merely a sop to his real reason for the step, which was a mad infatuation he mistook for love. Louise Hanchett's cold, classical beauty and Vere de Vere form, which she knew how to dress beautifully and in good taste, had so dazzled him that it never occurred to him to ask himself whether the object of his passion had wearing qualities; if she had common sense; if she was healthy and capable of bearing children; if she was of sound ancestry. However, there was some excuse for this carelessness in Mr. Gatlin's case, as, indeed, there is in the case of all but superman. Engaged as he was in the retail shoe business, he had never heard of Mendel's law, and if anybody, in conversation with him, had mentioned genetics, he would doubtless have thought that they were some new form of athletic contrivance. The only practical information he had on the Hanchett family was that Mrs. Hanchett was a shrew, that Mr. Hanchett was a middle-aged man whose head was bloody and bowed; that Louise was unhappy at home.

In Mr. Gatlin's protective instinct, abundant in all males, was particularly well developed; so he yearned to provide Louise with the happiness he knew she had missed and which he, thank God, was able to provide—for he possessed also the usual amount of masculine ego.

Following two years of married life, during which he strove manfully to accomplish the impossible, Mr. Theodore Gatlin went into a mental haze. Six months of this and he became peevish. He wanted a child—and when at last he realized that, in the phraseology of his times, there was nothing doing, there was born in him the first coherent thought he had ever had on the subject of matrimony. He told himself that he was sick unto death striving to be a good husband and acquiring no merit because of his efforts. He told himself he had a house but not a home; that Louise had "taken after her mother," which meant that he had taken after his afflicted father-in-law!

He gave considerable thought to the subject and finally decided that Louise would be all right if she only had something to occupy her mind. She sought happiness and blamed him because she could not find it. Mr. Gatlin did not know where happiness might be found, but inasmuch as he was moderately certain of peace of mind while attending to his business, he had a hazy impression that happiness is not infrequently found in securing a job and working at it. So when a physician informed him that his hopes of fatherhood were not apt to be realized he had a brilliant idea and broached it to Mrs. Gatlin.

"Let's adopt a baby!" he urged. Louise demurred. She had her doubts as to the advisability of taking over somebody's else troubles—one never knew how an adopted baby was going to turn out—there was no hurry, anyhow—she must have time to consider the idea—her health.

"To h—l with your health!" Mr. Gatlin roared, for the first time in his married life becoming vulgar. "Every doctor you've had tells me you're organically sound. You only think you're sick."

"My nerves," she protested, but he silenced her.

"You think too much about yourself, and not at all about anybody else, particularly me. What you need is a baby to fuss with. You'll learn to love it in a month as much as if it was your own flesh and blood."

"I'm afraid you'll not love it, Theodore. You're so cranky and irritable," she defended.

"Listen!" Mr. Gatlin commanded. "I'm at the point where I'm seriously considering suing you for divorce on the grounds that you're a barren woman. In other ways you don't measure up to my idea of a wife and companion. It's no fun for me to come home night after night and have to listen to your tales of woe—"

"You are devoid of sympathy," his wife charged. "You neglect me."

"Maybe I've failed," said Mr. Gatlin, "but by jimmies, I've tried, and I'm willing to keep on trying a little longer. Only, from now on, we're going to try my methods, and adopting a baby is one of them. If that fails I'll take the baby over myself and we'll call in the lawyers."

She knew she had gone as far as she dared. Even the dullest of married women know when that point is reached; that is, they know when it has been reached for that day.

"Well, if we can find a baby of good, sound, intelligent, healthy parentage," she assented grudgingly.

"I've got one staked out," Mr. Gatlin cried joyfully, "and I know its parents. They're sound as grindstones. I know the grandparents of the child on both sides."

"I don't know them personally," he went on, "but I've had a doctor look up their records. High class people. No insanity and no crookedness in them."

"I'll have to meet these grandparents and parents, Theodore."

"Unfortunately," he replied, "they're all dead."

"What did they die of?"

"The grandparents on both sides, of old age; the father of the baby was an army captain and he got killed in a fight in the Sulu islands. The mother died in childbirth and the baby is in the infants' shelter in San Francisco."

"Boy or girl, Theodore?"

"Boy."

"I could never stand a boy, Theodore. I must have a girl."

Mr. Gatlin grinned evilly. "I figured you'd try to edge out of it that way. It isn't a boy. It's a girl."

Louise Gatlin was not very intelligent, but she was sufficiently so to realize that for once in his life Mr. Gatlin was due to have his own way.

That night as he lay abed, Mr. Gatlin suddenly gave himself a prodigious poke in the ribs. "What a jackass I was not to consult that doctor before I married Louise," he groaned. "When I thought I could father a child of my own I didn't pay any more attention to its ancestry than I would to selecting a necktie. Anything that looked well would fill the bill. But when it came to selecting some other man's baby, I gave the job all the attention I would give to the purchase of a piece of property. I wouldn't think of buying a lot until I had run down the record of the title and satisfied myself there were no flaws in it. If men would only employ that much common sense in selecting their wives—or wives, in selecting their husbands—I knew what a nervous, complaining, selfish old shrew her mother was—what's that law the doctor spoke of? Ah, yes, Mendel's law. The law that like shall produce like. Simple! Natural! Any fool should have thought of that—and yet it took an old monk—a celibate—to promulgate the news. Whew—w—w—w!"

"Theodore," said his wife, from the other twin bed, "I should think you might be more considerate of me than to whistle like that and wake me up."

"I'm so happy, darling, I couldn't help it. Forgive me."

"Have you thought of a name for the baby?"

"I have, Penelope."

"A horrid name. Where under heaven did you get that name?"

To her unspeakable amazement he quoted a verse from Henry Herbert Knibbs' poem, "Out There Somewhere."

"We'll dance a merry saraband from here to drowsy Samarkand;

Along the sea, across the land, the birds are flying south,

And you, my sweet Penelope, out there somewhere you wait for me,

With buds of roses in your hair and kisses on your mouth."

They went by train to San Francisco next day. With the child in his arms and accompanied by his wife and the lady manager of the infants' shelter, Mr. Gatlin repaired to the Superior court and legally adopted the daughter of Capt. Ronald Elliot and Janet Elliot, both deceased.

From the courtroom they went to Grace cathedral and had her baptized in the Episcopalian faith—out of courtesy to Mrs. Gatlin's latest religious crochets, Mr. Gatlin having no religious affiliations whatsoever. There was a slight hiatus here. The pastor had just sprinkled water on the little dark head and said: "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and give thee the name of—" when Mrs. Gatlin interrupted softly—"Lucretia."

"Nothing doing," Mr. Gatlin declared. "Lucretia! Wasn't that the woman that poisoned people—a wop woman? Her name shall be Penelope. I like that name."

The pastor smiled faintly. Having already sensed that all of the enthusiasm for the child was Mr. Gatlin's, he was seized with a perverse desire to please the sentimental fellow, so he said quickly: "—and give thee the name of Penelope."

Mr. Gatlin hugged Penelope to him and kissed her back of the left ear.

"You mustn't kiss her, Theodore," his wife protested. "Kissing is unsanitary. You might give her some sort of disease."

"Oh, lord," Mr. Gatlin murmured. "Will I ever cease making hideous mistakes?"

For in that illuminating instant he realized that in adopting Penelope he had made a terrible mistake. His wife didn't want her! At the very moment of the commencement of his experiment he knew it was a failure. However, it was no part of his wife's intention (at least for the present) that he should realize this, so she took the baby from him.

Within the week, Theodore Gatlin, having communicated with the adjutant general of the army at Washington, ascertained that Capt. Ronald Elliot's body had been brought home from the island of Sulu and interred in the national cemetery at the Presidio of San Francisco. So he had Penelope's mother disinterred from the Potter's field and reinterred beside the soldier, after which he gave orders for the erection of a suitable monument over them.

Viewing him from every angle, he was a most peculiar retail shoe dealer.

For a month all went well with the Gatlins, and then Mrs. Gatlin issued her fiat.

"Theodore," she said, "I must insist on one thing. Penelope must never know that you and I are not her natural parents. I feel that such knowledge might detract from her love for us."

"Boy or Girl, Theodore?"

"That won't work any hardship on me, my dear," he replied. "I feel just as enthusiastic about her as if I were her real father."

"Another thing, Theodore. I love Penelope dearly, as you know, but I can't realize a slave to her. Do you realize, dear, how she keeps me tied down?"

He gritted his teeth, and his wife went on: "We simply must have a nurse for her."

"Have two of 'em," he growled. "Whatever she needs she shall have."

"That's right. Start spoiling her immediately."

It was always like that. However, as the child developed, she brought Mr. Gatlin each day closer to happiness than he had ever been before. She was his refuge. She was a healthy baby and hence a happy baby, and there was not the slightest chance that she would ever be spoiled by having her own wishes perennially deferred to. If Louise Gatlin accomplished nothing else worth while (and this she accomplished unconsciously) she did nothing to inflate Penelope's ego, which, as everybody knows, is the breeding ground of human selfishness, which, in turn, accounts for the unhappiness of most of humanity. Mr. Gatlin, of course, would have undone, in secret, much of this good work, had not the realization come to him quite early in Penelope's little girlhood that any demonstration of excessive affection on his part was inevitably counteracted by an excessive severity on the part of his wife toward the child.

Man Who Had First Idea of Process of Photography
Revealed Secret to Daguerre, and Died Poor, Unknown, and Forgotten by World.

The romantic story of the man who invented the process of photography which gave pictures that were subsequently unaffected by light, is recalled by the celebration of the centenary of the Fox-Talbot process of photography, held at Lacock abbey, England, the historic home of the Fox-Talbots.

Joseph Nicéphore Niepce had been compelled to resign his commission in the French army through illness and failing eyesight, and, returning to his native town of Chalons-sur-Saone, he settled down on a small estate which provided him with a living and gave him leisure to study philosophy. Although neither he nor his brother Claude had had any scientific education, both were interested in science. They fitted up a workshop in the farmhouse.

Among other things, they constructed a new locomotive machine in which rapidly heated air was substituted for steam, and one of the first bicycles ever made with a movable wheel—called the "celeripede"—which Joseph himself rode in Paris.

In 1811, Joseph Niepce turned his fertile brain to lithography, which had been recently invented by Alois Senefelder, and struck with the idea of substituting polished metal for stone, he tried to reproduce sketches drawn on a metallic plate with lithographic chalk.

He was experimenting one day, when a broad beam of sunlight streaming through the open door threw a reflection of his face on the polished plate over which he was poring. As he gazed on the reflection, he suddenly thought that if he could imprint such images by the mere action of the sun's rays, he would have invented something far superior to lithography. From that hour Niepce was wholly absorbed in the task of imprinting images by sunlight.

Success began to attend his efforts early in 1814, when he learned of the action of sunlight on silver chloride, a discovery made by K. W. Scheele in 1742. After many experiments he produced a faithful reproduction of a design in which lights and shadows preserved their natural position. When he plunged the metal leaf in a preparation of essence of lavender, he found to his delight that the portions of the bitumen not affected by the light had dissolved, disclosing the image protected from the ulterior action of the rays.

It is certain that Niepce was the real inventor of the Daguerreotype. Louis Jacques Mande Daguerre, a clever painter and the inventor of the diorama, had also been experimenting with processes for fixing the pictures on his diorama, but no success had attended his efforts.

He sought an interview with Niepce, and they entered into a partnership which was successful to the advance of photography, though Niepce did all the inventing while Daguerre got the credit. In all fairness it must be said that, having discovered Niepce's secret, Daguerre set himself to improve it.

Two great difficulties remained. Seven or eight hours' exposure was still necessary, and at the end of a certain time the picture became partially effaced. Both difficulties were ultimately surmounted, and success at last crowned twenty years of tireless research.

Unfortunately, Niepce did not live to see the consummation of his life's work. He died at Chalons July 5, 1833, poor and unknown, and forgotten by his fellow citizens.

Doctors Know!

... and they use
liquid laxatives

You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel. A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help—and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without aid.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit. It relieves a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset.

To relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. The druggist has it.

... let us show you why GOOD printing pays!

Are You A Credit Slave?

How many times a month do you, fearfully and with bowed head, lay your sacrifice of gold upon the altar of greed? Do you fret and worry about some weekly or monthly payment, which must be made to a finance company, or for some luxury which you could not afford? Who is to blame for your predicament. Yourself, possibly. You were unwise to make obligations which overburden you.
But then, it is only human to strive for and want better and finer things in order to make our lives more comfortable. We all gasp any opportunity which tends toward our comfort and well being. This tendency is a natural gift of the Almighty to our nature which makes it possible for us to make progress and work for ourselves and family.
Who or what is it that has distorted this God's virtue into a weakness and failing which can undo all your accomplishments and make your very life fretful and miserable?
The vast controlled monopolies of retail trade offer you, give you, yes beg you to take home and make use of all the wonderful luxuries the imagination can conceive.
Money to pay for it? Oh! don't worry. Our finance company will take care of the that.
Sure, that sounds easy. Two dollars down and two dollars a week. But you must be sure to have a job. You can bet that they will see to that.
This parasitic octopus is not satisfied with the money you can afford to spend but he must take a mortgage on your future earnings, yes, on your very life.
After you sign their contract and some misfortune overtakes you to make it impossible to meet your payments, will these financial wizards, who seek to make your life so comfortable, be considerate? Sure they will. They will garnish your wages for life if necessary, till they get their pound of flesh.
Is this good credit? Any credit for a luxury which you cannot pay for in 90 days is dangerous. Compare this with the sort of credit your local merchant issues. One glance at his books and you will recognize hundreds of dollars in credit dealt out in cases of emergency to help his patrons over the rough spots.
Does he prosecute you if you are in want and cannot pay? He does not overload you with merchandise you cannot afford.
YOUR LOCAL MERCHANT SELLS YOU WHAT YOU NEED, WHEN YOU NEED IT AND WITH A HEART.
To secure your budget balance from a subtle enemy conduct your daily business with your local community merchant. He is there to help you, not destroy you.
